CORRA HARRIS SAYS CAN'T TEACH WRITING

By Marge Lockman

In these hectic modern times of ours when many of us tend toward a Pollyanna super-sentimentally, particularly in our conversations, an interview with Corra Harris, novelist and columnist, is apt to leave one gasping. The refreshing and delightful lady and that fall into a plunge into cold, clear water and leaves one glowering all over. And feeling much better. There is a total lack of futile and unnecessary words in her conversation, and she has that rare faculty of immediately getting down to "brass tacks" and making the "brass tacks" of life seem pretty amusing at the same time.

If she were a man Corra Harris would be called a square shooter. What she has to say she says forcefully and with great sincerity. That is the keynote of her personality. A sincerity with self, with life, and with other people. A person that you can depend on. One feels that Corra Harris would be a splendid person to have around in times of stress and trouble. Even meeting her for the first time you feel an urge to call her "pal." In the most complimentary sense of the word.

She's an "old lamb"—I'm not being presumptuous, because that is what she is affectionately called by her intimates and those of admiring acquaintance everywhere. And she loves it. That seems her up as well as it can be done by any few words. Just an old lamb—but an "old lamb" with a very keen, straightforward mind and a very definite personality. In short Corra Harris is a thoroughly delightful personality.

Because I visited Mrs. Harris for the express purpose of getting her opinion on questions relating to writing and literature, we quite naturally talked of those two subjects. She feels that the Fiction attempted to cross the bridge some weeks ago, without satisfactory results, really did the town a favor. Just as the Chicago fire was pretty disastrous for those immediately concerned and at the same time the best thing that ever happened to Chicago by way of civic betterment, so the over-ambitious truck calls for more than twenty scenes and an exceptionally large cast, and is the most ambitious undertaking of the year by the Rollins Student Company.

It will be presented under Dr. Fleischman's direction in the Annie Russell Theatre.

WILL ROGERS BRIDGE GET CHRISTENED?

Agitation is rife in Winter Park for the proper dignitary to christen the new bridge between the mainland and the Island of Sicily when that structure is completed sometime in the near few days.

In the opinion of persons in a position to know, the oil truck that plunged into cold, clear water and attempted to cross the bridge some weeks ago, without satisfactory results, really did the town a favor. Just as the Chicago fire was pretty disastrous for those immediately concerned and at the same time the best thing that ever happened to Chicago by way of civic betterment, so the over-ambitious truck calls for more than twenty scenes and an exceptionally large cast, and is the most ambitious undertaking of the year by the Rollins Student Company.

YALE IN FLORIDA

FOR SPRING HOLIDAY

At this season of the year when a few of our winter visitors are starting back to the North there is one small but enthusiastic crowd that is heading south to Florida. Yale University in New Haven is out for spring vacation and it would be no exaggeration to say that a good half of the lads are either on the way or here already.

Winter Park is generally included in the itinerary, for Rollins and Yale are old friends and the Yale boys like to see how the "other half" lives. The Yale Glee Club, recently winners of the Eastern Intercollegiate crown, is scheduled to give a concert at the Annie Russell Theatre on Saturday, March 31. This organization is one of the finest in the country and includes much talent. The Howard twin piano soloists of the club, are already famous in Northern amateur circles and plan a stage and radio career.

THE LAST CONCERT OF THIS SEASON

The last concert of this season of the Symphony Orchestra of Central Florida will be given Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Recreation Hall. The program comprises: Prodiag, Choral and P yoga, Bach, Songs with orchestra, Bruce Dougherty, tenor soloist, Overture, Ronchous, by Beethoven. Prelude to "The Hole," by Saint Saens, Spanish Capricho, Rimsky-Korsakov.

TRADE FOR PEACE SAYS SENATOR ‘HAM’ LEWIS

(Continued from page 1) really needed. Then, in our own generosity and charity, let us buy those supplies from our own people, from our own factories and farms, and send those supplies to the nations in need of them, instead of sending them money. In this way, we serve the needy, we are faithful to humanity, and we prevent nations from buying armaments with our own money, and we stop countries from preparing for war against us with our own finances.

“In this way we shall be carrying out the Franklin D. Roosevelt—William H. Taft policy of ‘trade for peace’.

“It just happens,” contended the Illinois statesman, “that the U. S. can be enjoyed only by using the money expended for trade, instead of armaments. In this way, President Roosevelt is pointing the way to riches and prosperity for the people of the nations which will benefit from the trade treaties and at the same time maintain peace.”

MR. BURCHARD WILL LECTURE TUESDAY
“Lazy Days in England in the Nineties” is the subject of the lecture to be given next Tuesday night, March 27, by Lewis S. Burchard, prominent winter resident of Winter Park, in the Annie Russell Theatre at Rollins College. The lecture, to be delivered at 8:15, will be free.

RANDOM NOTES
Champagne glasses are once more interesting and we have them right here in Winter Park. Mrs. Parker, who has the Easte Gift Shop, held a delicate stemmed French cut glass in her hand and explained that such things are again being called for. In her charming shop, which has become quite an institution in Winter Park, Mrs. Parker has many unique things that appeal to women and,—by proxy to their men folk.

Of the many necessities which winter visitors from the North buy in the local shops they are most particular about their shoes. It is very pleasing for them to find in Orlando a shoe store where they can get a recognized shoe of national reputation, the Walk-Over, and find a full line of styles in all sizes. The Walk-Over shop is owned and operated by experienced shoe men who are local residents and taxpayers in Orange County.

Just by chance the other day I came upon a charming little house with a garden of that quaint intimate sort of beauty that we associate with old New England towns. It was the “Windsor Chair,” an antique shop, just a few steps across the Dixie Highway from famed old Alhambra Hotel, where General Grant used to sit and smoke on the front porch.

Here were Cherokee white roses clambering over the palms, vine star jasmine surging over the dormers and low porch eaves,—and a fern edged pool. On the easy porch were displayed interesting hooked rugs and chairs of old time, colored glass, tip tables, and other treasures that the antique collector so loves with knowing eye,—but without there was a homely air to the place that enhanced its value to the visitor.

For several years the “Windsor Chair” has been here, managed by Mrs. Earlah Smith, who has a shop at Willoughby Lake, Vermont, in the summer. She has many fine pieces in maple and pine, dressers, barister and fan-back Windsors, kitchen cabinets, tavern tables and all, and there is no doubt that Winter Parkers would find a visit very interesting and enjoyable.
YEATS PRaised AT POETRY SOCIETY

Yeats was largely responsible for the "re-irishization" of Ireland and the rebirth of Irish culture. Jessie Rentz from Rollins College gave an enlightening talk on the life and works of Yeats before a large audience of the Poetry Society of Florida last week. The meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Martin on Lake Virginia.

Mrs. Scollard traced the Irish national movement from early times to the present and explained the influence of the writings of many other poets on this movement, culminating in the work of Yeats. She told of the early life and influence of the writings of many other poets on this movement, explaining that she considered William Butler Yeats to be the greatest poet living today because he is printed at the office of The Rollins Press, Inc., Winter Park, Florida.

"BOOKES NEWE & OLDE"

"The Companionship of a Good Book is Better than the Company of a Thousand Men"

By EDWIN OSGOOD GROVER
Professor of Books, Rollins College, Winter Park, Florida

The Modern Library now contains 215 titles, of which more than 1,000,000 copies were sold last year at 86c a copy. One of the latest additions is Pearl Buck's "The Good Earth." An advertisement in a recent issue of a German booksellers magazine reads as follows: "Why must it be American or English? We have exciting books. No translation of English and American night-life literature, no salley sexual perversities and novels of adultery, no mad, nerve-irritating thrillers. No, we have what the people want: Good German home-cooking." Which means what? English publishers issued 15,022 different books during 1933, of which 4,089 were fiction. With all our boasted public education and higher literacy, the United States published last year only 6,570 books of which 1,806 were fiction. However, if you wanted to be up-to-date you would have had to read five new novels a day for 988 days—or be behind the times.

Dr. Burrell Rentz, who was a "contributor" to the Rollins Animated Magazine two years ago, has just published a novel called "Heid of Brons," which promises to rank with Lloyd Douglass best seller, "Magnificent Obsession," as a study of life in the United States in 1934.

When William Lyon Phelps calls "The Unforgotten Prisoner," by R. C. Hutchison, "a story of work of art and its effect like a shout of joy," one has to take notice. In England the book sold 12,000 copies the first day of publication. It has been called "A magical book of great nobility of spirit," after the manner of "The Fountain." Charles Dickens' "Life of Our Lord," written for his children 58 years ago, is now being serialized in newspapers throughout the English speaking world, will be published in book form in this country on May 15 by Simon & Shuster. The story runs only 10,000 words—about the same length as Dickens' "Christmas Carol." The world rights brought $15 a word or a total of $210,000.

The first edition of "Look to the Lightning," Gilbert Maxwell's book of distinguished poetry, is already out of print and will shortly become "scarce." If you have a copy of this first edition don't let it get away for it is likely to prove a good "investment."

...the past quarter century has improved vastly over the preceding years, and says so, emphatically. Asked how she felt young people with a natural ability to write could best be taught and instructed, Mrs. Harris replied that it was not possible to teach anyone to write. "They may be taught the mechanics of literary construction," she elaborated, "but there does not live in this world anyone who can teach another the mystery of putting life, and the illusive quality of life into words. The best critic for any author is his own sense of veracity; his own power to produce the illusion of reality; and his ability to detect for himself the fact that he failed to do it. Then comes the final test—whether he has the patience, genius, or whatever you may call it, to work on that paragraph or that one little page until every word on it is as much alive as if blood flowed through it instead of ink."

"I think our modern writers of fiction far surpass those of twenty-five years ago in producing a vicious psychology of life. They are better artists when it comes to interpretation and the portrayal of natural scenery. I have just been reading this morning "South Moon Under," by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings. It is a wonderful work of art—it is more than art. It is a wonderful work of natural scenery. I have just been reading this morning "South Moon Under," by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings. It is a wonderful work of art—it is more than art. It is a transcript of life itself—luminous, dingy, tragic, sweet, and compelling. I have not yet read far enough to discover whether she fogs this negative of life and loneliness and plain homely truthfulness, with the toxin of sex."

"I do hope not. For sex is not really a poison. It is an enchanting convenience of nature by which life is propagated and it should not be subsidized to the lewd interpretations of corrupt minds. I think there is an effort today to cleanse and dignify literature and I have no doubt at all but that we have before us a future in literature far beyond anything that has ever been accomplished. I am for every writer who makes an honest effort to portray all that is good in a manner to make it better if they can."

Corra Harris is an ardent disciple of the plan which Rollins College pursues in the education of American youth. "I believe it is the pioneer effort of a brave group of teachers to reform and vitalize situation," she stated, "and the bravest among them is Hamilton Holt. A man who can portray the beauty of courage, hope and faith in the lives of others; an impossible thing to accomplish if he had not already achieved it in his own life."

"The time is at hand when thoughtful men and women recognize him as a leader in the finest culture. By that I mean the culture which fits youth for the happier future now also at hand in their own country."

VISITOR COMPLAINS OF SMALL AUDIENCE

In a highly complimentary letter written to and published by the Orlando Sentinel, Mr. John Henry Hopkins, who is stepping at the Lincoln in Winter Park, took occasion to complain of the small audience that attended the concert of the Symphony Orchestra in the Orlando Auditorium last Monday evening. Writes Mr. Hopkins:

"Your visitor wonders why the attractive auditorium was not crowded. It is something very unusual to find so fine an orchestra with such high class program in any but the largest centers of population. Orlando and Winter Park can tell people in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago, that a winter in Orange County will not deprive them of real pleasures so far as the best orchestral music is concerned. You probably have known all this for some time. Your visitors will be glad to know it, as they explore the delights of a winter in Orange County, Florida."

In Winter Park our orchestral concerts are well attended but there is always room for more, and there is unquestionably a need for wider appreciation of the unusual musical opportunity which this excellent orchestra under Mr. Clemens direction affords us.

We need to have more missionary work done in behalf of musical culture and it would be a good idea to plan a definite program along this line. Let the Chambers of Commerce in both Winter Park and Orlando include music in their salesmanship for the community welfare.
